SAW 25 PRISONERS BEHEADED

Art Collector Comes Home To Recuperate After Oriental Experience.

(New York Sun.)

Adolphe Grosjean, a Frenchman, who has been 22 years in China, collecting Oriental art goods for a Fifth avenue shop, returned to New York and announced that he would stay here awhile and recuperate. He had witnessed, he said, the beheading of 25 Chinese in the streets of a little town in the province of Shansi and the sight determined him to leave the country and come to America. He said he was "caught in the vortex of a revolution, the cause of which he did not know."

"I had gone to this little town," he said, "to buy several old ceramics that had recently been excavated. A day or so after I arrived I noticed the streets were deserted and stores and dwellings barred. Something was expected to happen, but I couldn't learn what it was. Suddenly I heard noises down a street, and approaching I saw ten soldiers guarding sixty prisoners walking with their hands bound behind them. At every 25 paces the procession would stop and one of the prisoners was made to kneel. Then a soldier would swing a sword upon him and cut off his head. Sometimes they would have to hack two or three times to perform the decapitation. The body toppled over, the procession move forward another 25 paces and the performance was repeated."

"There was no confusion or excitement. The prisoners, bandits or revolutionists, I do not know which, took the whole thing as a matter of course. I decided to flee, leaving my purchases and baggage behind."

American Books in Russia.
The single American book most widely read in Russia is "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Some of Irving's works were translated for the Muscovite public, and the Russian boys have been thrilled by the doings of Leatherstocking and Uncas. Mark Twain is quite popular beyond the Niemen and the Beresina. All in all, it seems that Russians know more American books than Americans know Russian books.

Ben Franklin's audience was the world, so it does not surprise one to learn from a Russian critic that the first American book translated into Russian was the product of Poor Richard's pen. That was 13 years after he died.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

"Let there be no misunderstanding. Our present and immediate task is to win the war, and nothing shall turn us aside from it until it is accomplished. Every power and resource we possess, whether of men, of money, or of material, is being devoted and will continue to be devoted to that purpose until it is achieved."

"We shall regard the war as won only when the German people say to us, through properly accredited representatives, that they are ready to agree to a settlement based upon justice and the reparation of the wrongs their rulers have done."

"When this intolerable Thing, this German power, is, indeed, defeated and the time come that we can discuss peace—when the German people have spoken whose words we can believe and when those spokesmen are ready in the name of their people to accept the common judgment of the nations as to what shall henceforth be the bases of law and of covenant for the life of the world—we shall be willing and glad to pay the full price for peace and pay it ungrudgingly. We know what that price will be. It will be full, impartial justice—justice done at every point and to every nation that the final settlement must affect, our enemies as well as our friends."

The Interned Germans.

Some purchasers of Liberty Loan bonds, who have read exaggerated reports of the treatment accorded by United States authorities to the German civilians interned in this country, have written to the Treasury Department protesting against the use of any of the money raised by the Liberty Loans in "pampering" these alien enemies.

These interned German civilians are not prisoners of war and are not under the jurisdiction of the War Department or the Treasury Department, but by the provisions of our immigration laws are placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor and comprise officers and crews of the German merchant vessels seized by the United States, and other German civilians. Their deportation, which ordinarily would take place, is impracticable, in view of the international situation.

These aliens receive no compensation from the government except such as is allowed them for work actually performed, and the wages paid them are not exorbitant at all. In fact, if, from their labor and other sources they receive more than a moderate amount of money a month, all in excess of a reasonable amount for their care and comfort is withheld from them and placed to their credit in the postal savings banks or some other safe disposal of it.

The Department of Labor also officially states that these aliens are not allowed an excessive amount of food, but three meals a day of plain but thoroughly palatable, substantial food are given each. There is no waste in these detention camps and the same measures of economy and conservation are being practiced which are being urged upon every American household.

"Potter's Field."

"Potter's field," the graveyard in which are buried those who are interned at public expense, comes by its name legitimately. In England and the continent the clay used to make pottery was dug up in long trenches, which were left unfilled. Common consent soon made it possible for these unsightly stretches of ground to be put to the useful purpose of interring the bodies of those who were cared for as a charge upon the country.

HE WAS TAKING NO CHANCES

Careful Buyer Was Suspicious of Bargain Offered Him by Exasperated Real Estate Dealer.

The real estate agent was driving round town with a prospective buyer and trying to interest him in a certain piece of land. The agent had shown the same man several pieces of property for sale below current prices, and was beginning to think that he would never buy, no matter how tempting the offer might be.

Finally, the agent, exasperated at his client's faultfinding, said to him, "Well, Mr. Bickering, you don't want to buy anything. I don't expect to sell you anything, no matter how good it is or how low the price."

"I'll buy something good. You show me a real bargain, and you can sell it to me," replied Bickering.

"I have already shown you half a dozen good bargains, and I don't believe you would buy a dead-sure cinch for a big immediate profit. I'll prove it to you right now. Here, I'll sell you this silver dollar for 90 cents."

Bickering took the dollar, examined it on both sides, "hefted" it in his hand, and asked: "Is it a good dollar?"

"Of course it is a good dollar," replied the agent. "It's not even scratched, as you can see."

"Well, I hardly think I want it," answered Bickering.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," interrupted the agent. "I'll sell you that dollar for 75 cents. There is a 33 1/3 per cent profit in it for you at once."

Bickering examined the dollar again very closely, sounding it and "hefting" it repeatedly, asked several more questions, and finally handed it back to the agent, saying: "Well, you can keep this and give me the 25 cents."

ONE SOLEMN THOUGHT

Willie—Say, pop, when does man reach the age of discretion?
Mr. Henpeck—When he realize that he is too old to marry.

ELECTRIC FAN FOR DRYING.

From a warm weather instrument primarily the electric fan appears to be applicable to the problem of the hour—the conservation of our food. The United States department of agriculture has suggested the use of the conventional electric fan for drying vegetables. In a bulletin on the subject it states that tests have proved that many sliced vegetables and fruits placed in long trays three feet by one foot and stacked in two tiers end to end before an electric fan can be dried to the requisite dryness within twenty-four hours. Some vegetables require even less time.

THAT'S DIFFERENT.

"Ethel, dear, tell me honestly, did you return the engagement ring when you broke the engagement with Jack?"

"Certainly not! My feelings toward the ring have not changed as they have toward Jack."—Life.

HOW FATHER KNOWS.

She—Father thinks you are a great light!

He—Yes, we played poker last night and he trimmed me.—Town Topics.

IT WOULD.

"It would save a lot of trouble."

"What would?"

"If we were all as honest as we expect the other fellow to be."

STILL IN SOCIETY.

Mrs. Wyllus—Do the Walsinghams take boarders?

Mrs. Watkyns—No, indeed. They only have half a dozen paying guests.

MAYBE SO.

"All I want is justice."

"I'm inclined to think a lot of us get justice and don't recognize it."
